1 with them what we wanted them to report disbursements on a
2 debtor specific basis.

3 Q And is it your testimony that the debtors agreed at that 4 meeting that the exhibit that they prepared especially for you 5 was an exhibit that would be used to calculate the fees under 6 Section 1930 of the Bankruptcy Code? Is that your testimony?

7 A At that meeting, no.

8 MR. HOLTZER: Thank you. Nothing.

9 THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

10 MR. MCMAHON: Your Honor, very quickly. I would like 11 the Court to take judicial notice of four documents that have 12 not been moved into evidence as well as to move the exhibits 13 which I've introduced into evidence if the debtors have any 14 objection.

15 THE COURT: I take it there's no objection to the 16 exhibits?

17 MR. HOLTZER: Your Honor, there's no objections to 18 the exhibits that have been introduced to date.

19 THE COURT: Right. That's what I'm talking about.

20 MR. MCMAHON: Your Honor, I would like the Court to 21 take judicial notice of the -- in each the Genesis and the 22 Multicare cases the debtor's motion to -- motions, excuse me, 23 to maintain existing bank accounts and business forms and their 24 centralized cash management system motions.

25 MR. HOLTZER; No objection, Your Honor. They're

1 and we'll try to speed up the process if we can.

2 Mr. Walsh?

3 MR. WALSH: Okay, Your Honor, by my count we're down 4 to ten objecting parties including one or two parties who may 5 not even be here. However, there are a lot of issues. So what 6 I would -- what I would propose is I don't think I'm prepared 7 to respond to an argument -- an objection that I haven't quite 8 heard yet, so I think the best thing would be to let the 9 objectors go forward, make their argument, we'll respond, other 10 people who want to respond, and get done with it that way.

11 THE COURT: Well, I don't want to go argument by -- 12 in other words I want to hear from one objector at a time.
13 I'll gladly hear from the objectors first and then take your 14 response to all of them. I think at this point that would be 15 the most efficient way.

16 MR. WALSH: Okay, so you're suggesting that all the 17 objectors would go one after another and then -- then we would 18 all respond to everybody at the end?

19 THE COURT: That's fine, yes.

20 MR. WALSH: Or -- or along the way?

21 THE COURT: No. At the end.

22 MR. WALSH: At the end. Okay.

23 THE COURT: Who will go first by way of objection?

24 GMS, sir?

25 MR. PRIMPS: Certainly, Your Honor. William Primps

Primp - Argument

1 for GMS of the law firm of LeBoeuf, Lamb, Greene & MacRae.
2 Your Honor, I'm going to try to be quite brief. The time is 3 getting late and you've heard copious evidence, but I think it
4 can be summarized very succinctly. My August 17th submission 5 certainly argues that we believe that this plan should be 6 rejected because it violates the fair and equitable requirement
7 of 1129B of the Bankruptcy Code.

8 We think that essentially what Your Honor is faced 9 with here, looking at all the evidence, is every expert and 10 every expert's report in this proceeding has conceded that in 11 the LTC and pharmacy markets there has been a fundamental sea
12 change in valuations over the last four months since the time 13 that the data was input that formed the basis of the valuations 14 contained in the disclosure statement.

15 As Mr. Grillo's report, GMS Exhibit 8, shows there's 16 been a 65 percent runup in the composites of those two stocks
17 since the time that the data was put into the disclosure 18 statement. So the only issue in our mind is the degree of this 19 runup. Again, going back to the disclosure statement, you're 20 looking at a $1.5 billion enterprise value. We think that 21 taking midpoints of the CS First Boston and UBS Warburg numbers 22 that that number according to the debtor's own experts runs up
23 to 1.75 billion and Mr. Grillo has put forward the Evercore
24 number of 2 billion 75. Mr. Becklean thinks there's a higher 25 number, as he said by taking the additional step of using Mr.

Primps - Argument

1 Schulte's technique of looking out the window.

2 There's also a hurdle amount that I don't know that 3 that has been formally introduced before Your Honor, but it's 4 something that Mr. Walsh had in his submission number three, 5 Debtor's Table 3 of 2 billion 65. We think we make that 6 hurdle.

7 Now there have been criticisms of Mr. Grillo and his 8 techniques and how he's arrived at his valuation number and I
9 think that much of the fire has been directed against the use 10 of that $220 million EBITDA number. But perhaps the only thing 11 I can do now -- because there has been so much testimony on 12 that is simply draw Your Honor's attention to the number of 13 places in the record where there is support for the $220 14 million number and, indeed, support for the conservatism of the 15 use of the 220 EBITDA number.

16 There's the GMS Exhibit 2 and that was a projection 17 that Mr. Hager had worked on of $223,603,000 The GMS-3, the 18 Goldman Sachs documents which, of course, there's been a lot of 19 comment that that should be discounted because it was a selling 20 document and a sales document, that was why right before the 21 luncheon break we brought to Your Honor's attention the number 22 of efforts we've made to bring Goldman Sachs into this 23 courtroom so that they could testify to the numbers appearing 24 in their own documents and the fact that they made a decision 25 not to do so. That number in GMS-3 is $230 million EBITDA.

Primps - Argument

240

1 You heard Mr. Grillo refer to the third quarter 2 report of a $54.9 million EBITDA for the combined enterprise.
3 That appears in GMS Exhibit 5 and again multiply it out by four 4 quarters. That's very close to being on the money at the $220
5 million level.

6 And the list goes on. In GMS-12, the Lanassa
7 deposition, there's another Goldman Sachs document, the 8 testimony referring to that appears at -- starting at page 34
9 of Mr. Lanassa's testimony and that's the $222.2 million number 10 and that reappears in GMS Exhibit 11 which Mr. Kinsey asked Mr.
11 Shulte about again, $222.2 million. We think that this gives 12 ample record support to Mr. Grillo's valuation testimony.

13 There's also, of course, been a concerted attack on 14 the use of a multiple of in excess of nine by Mr. Grillo. The 15 multiple that it's implied out of his valuation work and a lot 16 of that attack I think is centered around the claim that this 17 is too much akin to the Manor Care implied multiple and Manor
18 Care is, of course, the -- I guess you'd say the Mercedes Benz 19 of the industry as we've heard in the testimony.

20 I think again Mr. Grillo's testimony stands on its 21 own here, but I would refer Your Honor to GMS-3 another Goldman
22 -- the same Goldman Sachs exhibit that had the $230 million
23 EBITDA number in it. There at page 1862 Goldman is proposing 24 or stating that, "From a financial and qualitative perspective 25 Genesis compares well to other players in the industry such as

1 Beverly and Manor Care." I think there's some, you know, 2 strong record evidence here that although certainly no one is 3 contending that Genesis should have the same multiple as Manor 4 Care, the kinds of discounts being proposed by the debtors are 5 not accurate.

6 Now we know that somewhere north of the $2 billion, 7 an enterprise value number, an improper recovery in excess of 8 the 100 percent of senior creditor amounts would be achieved.
9 We've argued the law in our submission to Your Honor that that 10 should result in a rejection of this plan. We personally think 11 -- or we think that one way to prevent this would be in the 12 award of out of money warrants to the G-5 creditors and that 13 way this development of a higher enterprise value which we 14 think is going to occur, that the improper recovery would be 15 prevented. But for now we think that the remedy here is 16 rejection of the plan and we think that the weight of the 17 evidence, Your Honor, supports that finding.

18 Thank you.

19 THE COURT: Thank you, sir. Next objector?

20 MS. MELNIK: Thank you, Your Honor. Selinda Melnik
21 for Charles L. Grimes. Your Honor, I would like to address a 22 few of the arguments that we've made in our objection that were 23 responded to by the creditors committee, the debtor and Mellon 24 as agent for the senior lenders, including on the issue of 25 valuation -- and if I could ask Your Honor's indulgence if you

Jenkins - Argument

1 would give us permission to split the argument a bit and allow 2 Mr. Jenkins to first address the valuation issue and then I'll 3 address the remaining arguments?

4 THE COURT: That's fine.

5 MS. MELNIK: Thank you.

6 MR. JENKINS: Thank you, Your Honor, David Jenkins
 7 for objector Charles L. Grimes.

8 There's two questions here. The first is the 9 valuation of the combined entity and the second is how to break
 10 it down between the Genesis and the Multicare creditors.
 11 Valuation of the combined entity, only two experts valued the 12 combined entity -- excuse me -- Mr. Becklean was one of them 13 and his report is particularly instructive. He used the 14 numbers of the company and their representatives. He did not 15 make up anything on his own. He used their numbers. That's 16 why there was very little cross-examination on that because 17 there's nothing you can do.

18 He did make two changes in the comparable company 19 analysis which is the one that he used principally to drive his 20 value conclusions. Excuse me. The two principal changes are 21 unlike UBS Warburg he used a valuation analysis based on 22 Genesis's last twelve months results. And do they criticize 23 that since Mr. Shulte made it very clear that that, in his view 24 was something that was very important to use.

25 The second, and perhaps more important, was his

Jenkins - Argument

1 change in the discount numbers. We have heard voluminous 2 testimony in this courtroom about how Beverly is comparable to 3 Genesis. Well, if it's comparable to Genesis as a stand alone, 4 Genesis as a combined entity is not going to be a worse
5 company. Yet UBS Warburg used on average a 10 percent discount
6 to the Beverly multiples. Mr. Becklean changed that to zero 7 percent based on the testimony in this courtroom.

8 He also changed Manor Care because the relations 9 between Beverly and Manor Care according to UBS Warburg and CS
10 First Boston was ten percent. Beverly is ten percent. Better
11 Manor Care is 20 percent better. Well, as Mr. Becklean 12 explained, those two companies haven't changed in the 13 marketplace. Nothing that happens in this courtroom or nothing 14 that Genesis does will change the relative valuation of those 15 two companies.

16 If you conclude, therefore, that Beverly is -- should 17 be valued the same without a discount to Genesis, then as a 18 mathematical concept the Manor Care number comes down to 10 19 percent on a discount which is what Mr. Becklean used. Those 20 two changes result in a valuation that is higher than what UBS 21 Warburg and CS First Boston came out together.

22 Mr. Becklean came out with a range of 1.7 to 2.2
23 billion. That's in his report. He explained why on the 24 witness stand that, although he could not pick a number, if he 25 had to be biased towards one end or another, you go towards the

1 top end of the range.

2 Why do you do so? Well, I think Mr. Shulte said it
3 best. You look out the window. What do you when you look out 4 the window? Well, health care stocks are hot these days. The 5 competitors, Beverly and Manor Care in particular, their 6 underlining earnings are improving. The estimates are being 7 updated even recently the CS First Boston analyst reports 8 yesterday indicated that just in the last month they're 9 improving their estimate earnings for those two companies.

10 There's not much you can invest in. If you think 11 this is a hot market there's only two or three publicly traded 12 companies. As a result of that, perhaps as a result of other 13 factors, the valuation of multiple -- excuse me, the valuation 14 multiples of the competitors are going up all throughout the 15 spring and summer. The result is that the stock prices of the 16 competitors are soaring. Mr. Hager gave me a hard time about 17 it, but in fact Beverly's stock price as risen by 80 percent 18 between April and August. And no, you can't put undue weight 19 on that but it's something to look at.

20 What else can you use? I'll represent that if you
21 look at the stock price changes in the UBS Warburg reports, 22 Manor Care's valuation -- excuse me, a stock price has risen by 23 approximately 50 percent between April and August. But when 24 UBS Warburg and CS First Boston put their numbers together, 25 what does the combined valuation of the company come up with?

Jenkins - Argument

1 There have been various numbers put in the paper submitted to 2 Your Honor that take these enterprise values and translate it 3 into a assumed stock price for the company.

4 In the initial submissions based on the April reports 5 from the two financial experts, the number was $20 and change.
6 The number now is $23 and change. That's approximately a 15
7 percent increase. So those stock prices of competitors are 8 soaring and everything is getting better, they're not giving 9 them much of an upper bump for that. This is looking out the 10 window to see if the projections -- excuse me, of the alleged 11 results of their experts are appropriate to rely on. For many 12 reasons we think they are not.

13 Let's look at another thing looking out the window, 14 and that's the company's projections. Mr. Hager testified that 15 they used to miss their targets routinely and they got 16 cautious, but that's an understandable human reaction if you
17 miss your targets. But the result is you get conservative.
18 Mr. Hager was criticized by the financial advisors to the banks 19 for -- excuse me, several of those numbers as coming in unduly 20 conservative.

21 There's another reason why you might want to make 22 your numbers conservative and that is they're bonuses. The 23 bonuses of the senior officers are based upon the financial 24 projections. Again, it's just normal human nature that you 25 want to make your bonus, you're going to want make those

246

1 projections as reasonable as possible, that is as low as 2 possible. So there are several reasons to believe that the 3 company's projections are conservative.

4 Your Honor doesn't have to decide that, but throw it 5 in in the part of looking out the window. Look what's going on 6 here.. The company's projections are probably conservative and 7 everything else in the market is going up, up, up, up this 8 spring and summer.

9 The second part is how do you break it down between 10 the creditors. Based on Mr. Becklean's numbers which we rely 11 upon that the valuation should be at the top end of his range, 12 that combined is above, perhaps materially above $2 million.
13 Now all the testimony we've heard is that Multicare as an 14 individual entity has relatively little value. It has no 15 management. It's essentially subordinate to Genesis. This is 16 reflected, we think, in the separate valuations that the -- 17 excuse me, that the proponents valuation experts have relied 18 upon in particular. We will accept Mr. Shulte's numbers for 19 Multicare standalone. Mr. Becklean did not do a standalone 20 analysis so we don't have anything there to rely upon. But Mr.
21 Shulte said this morning that $323,000 is the most likely value 22 of Multicare. We will accept that.

23 The result, if you take Mr. Becklean's combined 24 analysis, again you can't use Mr. Shulte's because he didn't do 25 a combined analysis, and subtract Mr. Shulte's number, you get

247

1 a valuation of 1.7 billion, perhaps well over that depending on 2 how high we're going up. I have not independently determined 3 what the cutoff number is, the so-called hurdle that you have 4 to get over. I will rely upon the numbers that have been 5 provided to me by the debtors. They say it's 1.55 billion.
6 The number I've just given, 1.7 billion gets us above that.

7 There's another way to look at how you break down the 8 valuation between Genesis and Multicare and that's the most 9 recent financial results. If you look in the last quarter and 10 this is based on the -- excuse me -- upon the press releases
11 that were put in evidence, Genesis' most recent quarter, 12 standalone Genesis is about 45 million and Multicare is about 13 $9 million. That is a five to one ratio which comes out almost 14 the same as the ratio that you get if you use Mr. Becklean's 15 valuations and subtract Mr. Schulte's standalone valuation of 16 Multicare.

17 We heard, only a couple of hours ago, that in its 18 most recent -- in the most recent results, that Genesis is 19 ahead $4 million over its projections and Multicare is behind 4 20 to $5 million. Genesis is the driver of this value.
21 Multicare, to use the analogy, is the caboose. They're along 22 solely for the ride.

23 Ms. Melnik will explain specifically what we're 24 requesting here, but the overall point we have is that the 25 efforts of the debtors here are -- excuse me -- the proponents

Melnik - Argument

248

1 of the plan are attempting to reward the Multicare senior 2 creditors by giving too much of the combined valuation to them.
3 And the people who are getting hurt are not the Genesis senior 4 creditors -- it's essentially the same people -- but rather 5 people such as my client, Mr. Grimes, who's a subordinated debt 6 holder.

7 Unless Your Honor has questions, I have nothing 8 further.

9 THE COURT: Thank you, sir. Ms. Melnik?

10 MS. MELNIK: Thank you, Your Honor. As I stated 11 earlier, what I would like to do is just address in specific 12 some of the responses to our objections that were filed by the 13 debtors, the committee and Mellon to bring a few things to Your 14 Honor's attention.

15 First, I'd like to address something that Mr. Walsh 16 represented in his preliminary statement which was that this is 17 a plan that had the unanimous support of all of the major 18 constituencies and he included amongst those the creditors 19 committee of Genesis. I believe Your Honor is aware of it, but 20 I would like to bring to Your Honor's attention again, the fact 21 that our understanding is the vote of that committee to support 22 the plan was not a unanimous vote.

23 THE COURT: I don't think that's what he meant.

24 MS. MELNIK: Okay.

25 THE COURT: But in other words to break down within

Melnik - Argument

249

1 each of those constituencies whether there was unanimous
2 consent, but it's noted.

3 MS. MELNIK: GMS obviously as a member of the 4 creditor's committee voted against the plan. Our understanding 5 is that the other members of the committee, which the 6 membership is listed on page 65 of the disclosure statement, 7 include American General and it was brought to my attention 8 today that they have resigned as of yesterday for reasons that 9 we don't know. Is that correct that they have submitted a 10 resignation?

11 MS. BECKERMAN: Your Honor, it is correct that they 12 have submitted a resignation.

13 MS. MELNIK: I don't know what the implications of 14 that are, but I just wanted to bring that to Your Honor's 15 attention.

16 The second issue that I think bears comment at this 17 point for a number of reasons including the fact that in the 18 debtor's proposed findings of fact and conclusion of law they 19 make a statement -- they make a finding that the burden of 20 proof on all issues in 1129A and B, it's on page 7 paragraph 21 3 --

22 THE COURT: Is that in debtors confirmation brief? I 23 don't recall that framework for debtors presentation a finding 24 of fact and conclusions of law submission.

25 MR. HOLTZER: Your Honor, she's referring to the

250

1 confirmation order that we --

2 THE COURT: Oh, the confirmation order.

3 MR. HOLTZER: The proposed confirmation order, Your 4 Honor.

5 THE COURT: I see, all right.

6 MS. MELNIK: It's on page 7 of the submission that we 7 were handed this morning, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Did I hand that back to you. I think I
9 might have. No?

10 MR. WALSH: You might have handed it back to me, but 11 I was actually going to ask you to trade since I gave you the 12 one without any exhibits. So if I can locate that --

13 THE COURT: In any event, on page 7 -- go ahead.

14 MS. MELNIK: In the version I have it's page 7 and 15 it's listed as numerical paragraph 3. Burden of proof is the 16 heading. It states the debtors have the burden of proving the 17 elements of Section 1129A and B of the Bankruptcy Code by a 18 preponderance of evidence. We have asserted in our objection
19 that the standard for 1129B should be clear and convincing 20 evidence based on a number of decisions of numerous courts and 21 we make note there as well that that issue has not been decided 22 in this Circuit, to our knowledge. The debtors in their 23 response to our objection -- and I believe maybe one of the 24 other responders to our objection -- make the assertion that 25 the correct standard for 1129B is preponderance of the

251

1 evidence, particularly with the issue of cram-down in 2 valuation.

3 And I also would assert on the issue of the validity
4 of the proposed releases that that involves the relinquishment.
5 Both of those elements -- their impact is the relinquishment of 6 some serious property rights that otherwise would inure to the 7 benefit of creditors and perhaps others and that, therefore, 8 preponderance of the evidence is insufficient. And I think 9 that's where those courts that have found the clear and 10 convincing standard more appropriate in 1129B have come out.

11 THE COURT: The releases that we're talking about -- 12 releases can be, indeed, an 1129 question, but they need not be 13 and in large part in this case I don't think they are, are 14 they? In other words, it's more of an 1129A-1 question, isn't 15 it? A 524 inquiry?

16 MS. MELNIK: I agree, Your Honor. I think they come 17 in all different sizes. Mellon argues that the releases that 18 we're contesting don't come under 524E and I'll get to that in 19 a quick second. Yes, definitely they come under 1129A-1 in 20 that respect, but we would also argue that to the extent that 21 they release claims belonging to the estate whose prosecution 22 could bring value into the estate, they do fall under the 23 valuation hurdles within 1129B. And to the extent they're 24 relinquished and the relinquishment gives up value that 25 otherwise might inure to the benefit of cram-down creditors, I

Melnik - Argument

252

1 think that issue might appropriately be included in 1129B as 2 well. And that's not just the third party releases it's the 3 inter-company releases as well, the proposed settlements.

4 THE COURT: Well, that's a different question maybe,
5 but on the releases of officers, directors, etc., the only 6 evidence we have in this record is that there are none that are 7 known of. Do we have --

8 MS. MELNIK: The other -- I'm sorry, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Go ahead.

10 MS. MELNIK: The other evidence was that none were 11 investigated.

12 THE COURT: That's correct.

13 MS. MELNIK: Okay, which is another issue.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MS. MELNIK: And my next point is actually the 16 releases, Your Honor. A couple of things. It's our position 17 that they are not fair, they're not necessary and under Third 18 Circuit they're not sustainable, in general. Our additional 19 position is that they affect a settlement that requires Court 20 approval or at the very least, puts on the debtor a burden of 21 proof to show that these were investigated to explain to the 22 Court what the investigation revealed, if anything. And to the 23 extent that there is some potential viability to the claims 24 that have been raised, that a valuation of whether or not it 25 was in the benefit of the estate to go forward with their

Melnik - Argument

253

1 prosecution, what was done in that regard.

2 Instead in their responses to our objection and 3 several of the other objections filed in this case, Mellon and 4 the Genesis Committee and the debtors do a number of things, 5 essentially boiling down to the fact of taking the position 6 that they're in the best interest of creditors. And we 7 respectfully assert that that's for Your Honor to decide and 8 not for the debtors or the committee or Mellon.

9 I would like to go through some of the points that 10 are raised by the responders to the objectors that I think are 11 important. In its response Mellon asserts that the releases 12 are an integral part of the compromise embodied in the plan.
13 That's an exact quote. I don't know the page number. I 14 apologize. To me that sounds like a settlement and on that 15 point I would refer back to my previous comment that the burden 16 of proof on whether that such a settlement and compromise is in 17 the best interest of the estate, we would assert has not been 18 met or even shown.

19 Mellon also argues that Section 524E doesn't involve 20 the kinds of third party claims that we're talking about, that 21 it really only deals with debtor and co-debtor claims. Well, 22 we would argue that it does involve and include claims that are 23 derivative of debtor claims and also claims that derive from an 24 indemnification obligation of the debtor. And to the extent 25 that third parties are implicated in those derivative claims,

Melnik - Argument

254

1 they are impacting a release that parties who have voted to 2 reject the plan have not agreed to. And to the extent that any 3 order granting those releases is entered, it is our position, 4 the position we've taken in our objection, that those releases 5 should be expressly limited to exclude their impact on those 6 creditors who have not voted to accept the plan under Third 7 Circuit law.

8                 Also, to the extent that those are -- the claims that 9 we are concerned about are derivative of claims the debtors 10 might have against the numerous third parties, including any 11 right to move for the equitable subordination of the senior 12 lenders, the creditors will be bound by that release even if 13 they have voted to reject the plan. Again, that's a 14 settlement, is our position, of a claim that has been asserted
15 in this case by, most recently, the Multicare Creditors
16 Committee that Mellon argues was withdrawn with prejudice.

17                 Our recollection, and I think the record reflects 18 that the transcript of the disclosure statement hearing, is 19 that that release -- I'm sorry -- that withdraw of the motion 20 was only with prejudice if the current plan of reorganization
21 with the distribution that was given to the Multicare creditors 22 in exchange for that withdraw of their motion, is confirmed.
23 That hasn't happened yet. So I don't think it's completely
24 accurate to say that it was withdrawn without prejudice. It 25 was withdraw contingent on confirmation of that distribution to

Melnik - Argument

255

1 the Multicare creditors.

2 Mellon also argues that the release of Mellon itself 3 as an agent, is in consideration for the distribution that the 4 banks are making to Genesis classes 4 and 5, the unsecured
5 creditors and bondholders, which they say is essentially a gift 6 from the senior lenders. Well, first of all, they have to get 7 past the hurdle we raised about the absolute priority rule.
8 And even given if that is true that that is a gift, that's not 9 a gift that's coming from Mellon as agent for the lenders.
10 Mellon, in this case, served as agent for the senior lenders of 11 Genesis and Mellon served as agent for the senior lenders of 12 Multicare. The release that they are getting is, in our 13 opinion, for no consideration. There's no quid pro quo there 14 and as a mere agent they had nothing to give up in 15 consideration.

16 The next point that they make is that the bank should 17 be entitled, and Mellon should be entitled, to the releases
18 because of the indemnification provisions under the pre-19 petition loan agreements. And even if those are sustainable 20 and not otherwise attackable, those are two party agreements.
21 Third parties, such as Genesis creditors, never agreed to be 22 bound by those agreements and I don't believe that on the basis 23 of those indemnifications, those releases can, in any way, bind 24 those third parties.

25 Finally, Mellon seems to argue that there would be no

1 distribution to class G5 without those releases and, again, we 2 would assert that that is only true if the valuation shows that 3 they are not getting more than a hundred percent of their 4 claims.

5 With regard to the committee, they essentially argue 6 that the release provisions that apply to the committee should 7 be approved because they're essentially the same provisions
8 that we involved in the PWS Bruno's case that the Third Circuit 9 upheld in its decision not too long ago, I believe 2000. If 10 you take a look at those provisions, they are not the same 11 provisions. The provisions in the PWS case, which are set 12 forth in the Third Circuit's decision, include language that 13 are not included in the provisions that are set forth in the 14 plan and in the disclosure statement in this case. On the 15 Third Circuit specifically said that exculpation and immunities 16 are not blanket vis a vis creditors committee and that the 17 committee and its members do remain liable for wilful 18 misconduct, gross negligence and ultra virus acts. And,
19 indeed, the PWS release provision recites the wilful misconduct
20 and gross negligence and the Court, Third Circuit and PWS, 21 specifically says that the ultra virus acts as well need to be 22 included in a carve out of total indemnification and 23 exculpation.

24 And in support of that, the Third Circuit looks to 25 Bankruptcy Code Section 1103C and finds that that requires that

Melnik - Argument

257

1 and indeed in the PWS case that release provision looks to the 2 duties and responsibilities expressly under 1103C, which this 3 provision in this case does not.

4 Management, with regard to the releases, the officers 5 and directors, the management received -- the debtors and 6 others argue that management received various releases,
7 forgiveness of loans, etc., etc. fairly early on in the case
8 and, therefore, it's the law of the case and Your Honor doesn't 9 have any ability to overturn that. We would take exception 10 with that, but we would also like to bring to the Court's 11 attention that obviously things change and one of the things 12 that changed is that at the time of the -- our understanding is 13 that the time of the motion for the approval of various 14 employee retention programs, the picture that was being 15 presented in this case was a little bit different.

16 At the disclosure statement hearing Mr. Walsh 17 mentioned that at the beginning of the case the banks asserted 18 that they were over secured and on that basis sought and 19 obtained from Your Honor adequate protection payments. I think 20 that seeking very expensive employee retention payments in an 21 atmosphere where one is being told that the senior lenders are 22 over secured, is quite different than seeking employee 23 retention payments at a point in time as now where all of 24 sudden we're being told that the banks aren't going to be 25 getting a hundred cents on the dollar for their claims. And

Melnik - Argument

258

1 also that more junior creditors are not going to be paid.

2 We would also argue that the range of benefits 3 inuring to the officers and directors is fairly substantial and 4 comes, as Your Honor was presented today, in many different 5 forms. And while the creditor's committee, I believe, argued 6 that this is compensation as well for post-confirmation work, 7 with all due respect that work hasn't been performed as yet.

8 Finally, the release of potential claims against 9 management and the officers and directors is asserted to be 10 further compensation for their pre-and post-petition and post-11 confirmation services. We would argue that they're getting 12 enough already. We would also argue that their position that 13 having to respond to any claims asserted against them post-14 confirmation, would detract from their duties and be harmful to 15 the estate, is highly speculative and we believe not relevant.

16 Finally, to the extent that there exists claims 17 against the officers and directors that may or not have been 18 determined or dealt with otherwise in the retention motions, 19 and those claims are being released by this plan, again, we 20 would assert that this is in the nature of a settlement. It 21 requires meeting a burden of proof that has not been presented 22 to this Court. As Your Honor pointed out, we heard testimony 23 from Mr. Hager that these were not even investigated, they were 24 certainly raised. They may not have been asserted formally 25 until the motion for the appointment of a trustee by the

1 Multicare Creditors Committee, but they had been asserted in 2 other ways, I believe, through negotiations on information and 3 belief.

4 Again, that requires Court approval. It's not 5 something for the debtors or the committee or Mellon to say is 6 in the best interest of creditors and that it's our position
7 that there has been absolutely no offering of proof in support 8 of a settlement of those issues.

9 Finally, Your Honor, the last major point that was 10 addressed by the responders to our objection was on the issue 11 of substantive consolidation. And I want to make perfectly 12 clear, Your Honor, that what we are asserting as the improper 13 substantive consolidation is not how it's being characterized 14 in several of those responses. All of the supporters and 15 proponents admit that this plan gives rise to a deem 16 consolidation and they assert that in response to our taking 17 the position that there is a substantive consolidation 18 occurring here that hasn't been proven or approved. That's not 19 the consolidation we're taking about, the internal Genesis and 20 the internal Multicare consolidation.

21 Also, the committee and others argue that we're 22 saying that the post-confirmation merger is an invalid
23 substantive consolidation. And that's not what we're saying 24 either.

25 THE COURT: What are you saying then?

Melnik - Argument

260

1 MS. MELNIK: Here's what we're saying. What we're 2 talking about is the merger that is going to incur in a nano-3 second on the effective date of the plan that will result in 4 securities of the reorganized Genesis and those securities are 5 essentially the property to be distributed to creditors under 6 the plan. What we believe is happening here is form over 7 substance. The debtor can't have it both ways. To argue that 8 all of the synergies that could possibly occur through the 9 merger of these companies has already occurred since 1997 -- 10 you know, that brings up the question why bother with merger.
11 Why didn't you do it before they said they had to go into 12 Chapter 11 to do the merger? But they're going to do the 13 merger a nano-second after the confirmation becomes effective.
14 And they're giving Multicare creditors Multicare stock, 15 essentially reorganized Multicare stock, and then merging that 16 entity in a nano-second after confirmation into Genesis.

17 THE COURT: What's wrong with that from the 18 standpoint if we understand the proposal, that it seeks to 19 allocate the debt and equity, the new debt and equity, in a 20 proportional way?

21 MS. MELNIK: We believe it doesn't, Your Honor, for 22 the reasons that were discussed before and also because the 23 allocation -- well, there are a number of things. First of 24 all, just the allocation in and of itself. Mellon represents 25 in its response to our objection that the allocations under the

1 plan were the result of arm's length negotiations. The problem
2 we have with that is that you've got two arms and one body.
3 There was one body that was the senior lenders or their agents
4 negotiating on their behalf and the right arm and the left arm
5 disagreed -- I mean agreed and shook hands. I think that's a 6 fairly unique definition of an arm's length negotiation.

7 THE COURT: Do I have any evidence on this record to 8 reflect that the proportionate distribution of a debt and 9 equity to Genesis versus Multicare creditors is improper, is 10 out of whack, is inappropriate?

11 MS. MELNIK: Yes, I think Mr. Jenkins specified a 12 number of areas that had to do with the valuations that were 13 done of Multicare and Genesis. I think you also have testimony
14 on the liquidation valuations that were presented to Your Honor 15 yesterday that showed that the assets -- one of the points that 16 came out is that the appraisals and other things that had been 17 utilized by the banks in the pre-petition stage were considered 18 by the debtor's financial advisor to be so out of date they 19 couldn't even use them.

20 I think you heard testimony today from Mr. Hager that 21 talks about an incredible commingling of assets as well as 22 liabilities amongst these debtor groups. The debtors have 23 utilized the argument that certainly internally amongst these 24 groups, if not together, they couldn't separate things out and 25 that's why they've done a deem consolidation, at least on the

Melnik - Argument

262

1 vertical, in the vertical sense. And as the committee cites
2 the Fifth Circuit of Babcock and Wilcox recently finding that 3 its substantive consolidation occurs when assets and 4 liabilities of separate and distinct legal entities are 5 combined in a single pool and treated as if they belong to one 6 entity.

7 There's a pool of assets here, that's reflected by 8 the reorganized Genesis and the stock that's going to be 9 distributed based on that reorganized Genesis. There are 10 elimination of inter-company claims which is another point that 11 the Fifth Circuit and the Second Circuit recently looked to in 12 terms of substantive consolidation, and liabilities are being 13 satisfied from a common font. I don't know, based on the 14 liquidation valuation testimony that was presented in this 15 Court, whether indeed the allocations are valid. I don't think 16 this Court has any way to determine that.

17 THE COURT: All right, anything else?

18 MS. MELNIK: Your Honor, just in closing, we believe 19 from the evidence that's been presented to Your Honor, that the 20 purpose of the bankruptcy filing of both of these sets of 21 debtors was designed to wipe out the sub-debt and the unsecured
22 debt prior to effecting the merger that was contemplated ab
23 initio and in the process to release several sets of claims 24 both of the debtors and against the third parties might have 25 against the banks and management. We haven't heard of any

Melnik - Argument

263

1 other justification that's been presented in this case.

2 THE COURT: The fact that there was -- I don't know - 3 - 1.8 billion dollars of secured debt would not have done it?

4 MS. MELNIK: Well, they were over secured at the 5 inception of the case, according to them, and they got adequate 6 protection payments from Your Honor and a number of other major
7 expenditures came out of that estate right off the top. And I 8 think you've heard evidence about how those debtors have 9 performed since then and what's available at the exit line.
10 And speaking of the exit line, in terms of the valuations I
11 think all those numbers can be juggled six ways to Sunday, as I 12 think Mr. Schulte or someone else said today, the approach is 13 unavoidably judgmental. And they can be juggled many ways for 14 the reasons that were stated previously to show lower 15 valuations to meet the goals that we think were the goals at 16 the inception of this case.

17 It's our position that the only way to show true 18 value of reorganized Genesis common stock is how the 19 marketplace will value it, which we won't see till the merger 20 occurs. Mellon cites a case from the Northern District of 21 Illinois that stands for the position that you can't take into 22 account the valuation of stock post-merger if you're valuing
23 that stock prior to the merger. And that case addresses 24 appraisal rights of minority shareholders in a buyout situation 25 before a merger goes forward.

Melnik - Argument

264

1           We found, at least one case, that I just want to 2 bring to Your Honor's attention, that seriously discredits and 3 takes issue with that position. Your Honor, it's Lawson, 4 Martin, Wheaton, Inc. v. Smith. It was decided July 14th, 1999
5 by the Supreme Court of New Jersey and the cite is 160 N.J.
6 383, 734 A.2d 738. That court remanded to the lower court and 7 instructed that court to do a post-merger valuation for the 8 purpose of determining the distribution to those buyout 9 objecting minority shareholders. We don't take a position on 10 whether that situation is wholly analogous to this, but as 11 Mellon raised it in support of their position, we thought Your 12 Honor should know about this other case.

13           Because we believe that true value doesn't occur 14 until the merger and the marketplace puts a value on it, and 15 because we see this distribution of reorganized Genesis stock 16 amongst the classes as an intra-creditor dispute, while we 17 would sit with GMS and says yes, our best wish is for you to 18 reject the plan, Your Honor. But short of that, we don't see a 19 reason why that merger can't go forward and all of the other 20 distributions under the plan be made including a distribution 21 of all but ten percent of the stock that would be going to the 22 senior lenders of Genesis and ten percent of the stock that 23 would be going to the senior lenders of Multicare and have 24 those two sets of stock be placed in escrow until a point in 25 time when the market sets a value. I believe at his deposition

George - Argument

265

1 Mr. Hager testified that that kind of -- they can't get listed
2 on the New York Stock Exchange until they've gone through a 3 quarter --

4 MR. HOLTZER: Objection, Your Honor, that's not in 5 evidence. The deposition is not in evidence.

6 MS. MELNIK: Oh, I'm sorry.

7 THE COURT: Indeed it's not.

8 MS. MELNIK: I don't know when that date is, Your 9 Honor, let me say that. We can pull forward or have -- I'm 10 sure we have tons of investment bankers here who could tell you 11 better than I could when an appropriate date of when the market
12 values a stock upon a merger. But that is one recommendation 13 that we would make, Your Honor, that we would like you to 14 consider as a possible resolution of this intra-creditor 15 dispute. Thank you.

16 THE COURT: Thank you.

17 MR. GEORGE: Thank you, Your Honor, Edmond George, 18 Obermayer, Rebmann, Maxwell and Hippel on behalf of the AGE 19 Entities. Your Honor, having been in court for the last two 20 days and probably not being one of the more significant players 21 in the case, some of the things that I've heard over the past 22 couple of days have struck me as curious and somewhat 23 confusing. But the most confusing thing to me is how the 24 debtor has backed off from some of the statements that they've 25 made in their disclosure statement about how great this merger

George - Argument

1 was going to be for creditors. For example, on page 76 of the 2 disclosure statement they say, "In summary, the security the 3 creditors are entitled to receive under the proposed scenario
4 incorporates the value of the combined Multicare and Genesis 5 estates.

6 It is the position of both debtors that through the 7 preservation of the common infrastructure purchasing power, 8 access to capital and opportunities for administrative cost 9 reduction, value is created which exceeds the value that each 10 company would realize independently." But yet when they 11 brought their experts here and it seems to me that the debtors
12 position is that the more people that say it, the more true it 13 becomes because I do believe that the testimony was in large 14 part cumulative and duplicative.

15 But there is a real question in my mind whether this 16 solicitation was made in good faith because creditors who read 17 that disclosure statement were under the impression that this 18 merger was going to add value to this combined entity. But all 19 the testimony from all of the debtor's experts in this case 20 seem to say that the sum is no greater than the two individual 21 parts and that seems disingenuous --

22 THE COURT: I will tell you that's not how I 23 understood it, although clearly you're right to focus on that 24 provision in the disclosure statement from the standpoint of 25 operational synergies. We do understand that much or all of

267

1 that has been accomplished and that is somewhat misleading,
2 that is, the statement that you've read. Whereas what I 3 understand is proposed here by way of enhanced value is the 4 capitalization opportunities, the worth of equity of a larger 5 operation, that kind of merger value.

6 MR. GEORGE: And, Your Honor, that may be something
7 that you, with all due respect, as the Judge and me as a 8 bankruptcy lawyer with some years of experience would 9 understand, but I think if you read it, that's the impression 10 that's intended to be given there that there is synergies that, 11 as a consequence, would increase the value of the combined 12 company and that's why the stock has a benefit to unsecured 13 creditors because once they get the stock, there's going to be 14 an increased value. But no one's spoken about that and strange 15 credulity that in this combination where these savings in 16 administration costs are being procured, that there's 17 absolutely not one dollar in increase.

18 And it's AGE's position, Judge, that this transaction 19 is, in large part, being driven by the secured creditor in this 20 case and that, I think, can be viewed as far back as February 21 when Your Honor entered the order on the management incentive
22 compensation program. Back then they said we want to be out 23 before October 31st and if you do management, you're going to 24 get an incentive. Well here we are two days before the end of 25 the month and miraculously we're here.

268

1           The plan as we see it, Judge, is unfair. It's unfair
2 to creditors and part of the unfairness is some of the issues
3 that I raised with Mr. Hager and they go to the compensation
4 that's being provided to management in this case. Your Honor, 5 with the combination of the monies that are being either paid 6 directly to the management of the debtors or being forgiven to 7 them by way of debt relief and in the gross ups that are being 8 paid to these people to pay the taxes on the forgiveness. I 9 don't think there's any justification for that in a case where 10 creditors are getting less than seven cents on the dollar.

11           These managers, these operators of the company, are 12 getting a hundred percent on their pre-petition claims that 13 relate to deferred compensation, as we heard. They're getting 14 a big bonus for coming out of bankruptcy, just the fact of 15 coming out of bankruptcy. None of it tied to performance and 16 our position is, Judge, is that management has done what the 17 bank group has wanted them to do to get this case where it is.
18 And it's ironic that the valuation that has come in is so close 19 to the bank debt.

20           I think that the testimony of the objectors in this 21 case more accurately portrays what the value of this entity is 22 on a combined basis. Rather than go back over that, I'll let 23 my colleagues discussion on that be the word of the day from 24 AGE's standpoint.

25           Your Honor, we believe that there has been an effort

George - Argument

269

1 by the debtor and the bank group to suppress the value of the 2 company in order to keep unsecured creditors out of the money 3 in this case and we don't think that's fair and we think that 4 it's ironic that not one of the experts in this case opined
5 about the value of this company on a combined basis. And I
6 think Your Honor has to ask the question why wouldn't they do 7 that. If what creditors are being asked to take are shares in 8 a merged company, why aren't we finding out what the value is 9 on a combined basis. I think that's a question that Your Honor 10 has to ask.

11 Your Honor, with respect to the specific provisions
12 of the plan that we objected to, I think they can be summed up 13 as the issues that relate to the releases and the punitive 14 damage claim. We asked Mr. Hager about punitive damages when 15 he was on the stand and he said that not only has Genesis never 16 had one adjudicated against him, that he was unaware of the 17 existence of any that weren't covered by insurance.

18 There's a case that was in the District of Delaware 19 called In Re F&F Holdings. It's a February 17th, 1990 case.
20 It is Lexis case, Judge, 1998 U.S. District Lexis 10, 741 and 21 that's Judge Farnan. And he says, "That the bankruptcy courts 22 neither prohibit or mandate the allowance of punitive damages.
23 However, courts have the equitive power to limit or disallow
24 punitive damages where the claims would frustrate the debtor's 25 reorganization," and they make reference to the AGE Robbins

1 case which is found at 89 BR 555. And in this case, the F&F
 2 case, the Court said, "The Court believes it would be premature
 3 to disallow punitive damage claims against the debtors. There 4 are only two claimants with punitive damage against the state, 5 neither of which have been liquidated. Moreover, the debtors do
 6 not contend that allowance of these punitive damage claims 7 would significantly hamper their reorganizational efforts.
 8 Accordingly, the Court will sustain C. Finn's objection to the 9 exclusion of punitive damages under the plan."

10 There has been absolutely no testimony, Judge, that 11 this is a case like the AGE Robbins case or other cases where 12 there are massive torts and punitive damage claims. It's 13 simply not the case here and to say that punitive damage
 14 should, out of hand, just be dismissed because the bank group 15 doesn't feel that they should participate with other unsecured 16 creditors, it's unfair. We think it's inappropriate and we 17 think it's not permitted.

18 There's another case, Your Honor, that I point to 19 Your Honor and it's Allegheny International, Inc. and it's 20 reported at 106 BR 75. And in that case the court, and it's 21 Judge Consetti (phonetic) in Pittsburgh, he says, "The Court 22 has far reaching powers to sift the circumstances surrounding 23 any claim to see that injustice or fairness is not done in the 24 administration of the bankruptcy state." And then he makes 25 reference to the Robbins case. He says, "The Court recognizes

1 the wild card characteristics are punitives." But in that 2 respect, Judge, he says, "In this case there appears to be no
3 extraordinary punitive damage claims, nor do the pending
4 punitive damage claims implicate any inherently dangerous 5 products or otherwise affect the debtor's ability to 6 reorganize." And, Your Honor, that seems to be the theme of 7 these cases that talk about punitive damages.

8           In those instances where the punitive damages are 9 monumental and if the allowance of them would prevent the 10 estate from going forward with the confirmation of its plan, 11 then, in that instance, I can see both the business 12 justification and a legal basis for it. But under the facts of 13 this case, Judge, and I would indicate that the debtor did not 14 propound any evidence about this issue, that there's absolutely 15 no information from which the Court could rule that that 16 separate classification of punitive damages for the other 17 members of the G4 classes in the Genesis estate is appropriate.

18           The other issue, Judge, and the language of the plan 19 and disclosure is not, in my opinion, a model of clarity on the 20 issue, but we, the AGE Entities, have filed RICO claims against 21 the Genesis entities which are being litigated in Delaware in 22 the District Court. And, Your Honor, when I objected to the 23 disclosure, the objection that I made at that point was that it 24 was inappropriate to grant a third party release because I 25 believe that the AGE Entities may have claims against Mr.

George - Argument

272

1 Walker, Mr. Hager and possibly the bank group and other members
 2 of the board of directors of Genesis. And in this case, Your 3 Honor, there's been absolutely no record established, no record 4 evidence established either for the need for that release or 5 the propriety of that release under these circumstances.

6 And, Your Honor, I would ask Your Honor and I'm sorry
 7 to be rushing through this. I hope that I'm not going too
 8 fast, but the Continental II case, 203 Fed.3d. 203, talks about 9 releases of this type. And they say that releases of non-10 debtor parties are regarded with great disfavor and that there 11 must be factual evidence in the record to support the 12 conclusion that the released and permanent injunctions are the 13 key -- the word key -- to Continental debtors reorganization or 14 that the Continental debtors would be unduly burdened.

15 Now, Judge, here there's been absolutely no 16 indication that that's the case. All they've said is that we 17 want these releases. There's not been any testimony on the 18 record that there's been one of these lawsuits filed. There's 19 not any testimony that even if any such lawsuit was filed that 20 anybody is being burdened by it or that there's inability to go 21 forward with the business of the debtor at hand because of it.
 22 And there is absolutely no evidence on the record to support 23 it.

24 And, Your Honor, I think I don't have to repeat to 25 Your Honor what the standard is, is that there has to be a

273

1 showing that there's a fairness element involved. There has to 2 be a showing that there's necessity for such an injunction.
3 And I submit, Judge, that even under a flexible approach which 4 the Court would be required to take with respect to these 5 matters, that there is no justification for a release in this 6 case of any party, particularly the bank group and the 7 individual officers and directors of the company.

8 Your Honor, in sum, our feeling, the AGE Entities 9 feeling, is that the debtor has suppressed the value of the 10 assets of its company on a combined basis for the purpose of 11 precluding unsecured creditors, like AGE, from getting a 12 meaningful distribution. We don't believe that it's fair and 13 equitable. We don't think it's in the best interest of the 14 unsecured creditors that the plan be confirmed. We feel that 15 the plan violates 1129A in that it is not proffered in good 16 faith and that it violates the provisions of the Bankruptcy 17 Code dealing with separate classifications and that the 18 classification is not grounded in any business judgment.

19 The one statement that was made by, I believe, the 20 bank group in response to the objection that we filed was that 21 any money that unsecured creditors are getting in this case
22 it's coming from the bank group anyway so since the creditors 23 are out of the money, they don't really have any reason to 24 complain in this case. Well, Judge, we submit that there is 25 value in this case and that the experts that were propounded by

Morrison - Argument

1 the debtor in this case should not be relied upon by this 2 Court. We believe that the unsecured creditors are not being 3 fair and we would urge Your Honor to not confirm this plan.

4 THE COURT: Thank you, sir.

5 MR. GEORGE: Thank you, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Other objectors.

7 MS. MORRISON: Good afternoon, Your Honor, Susan 8 Morrison on behalf of 44 tort claimants. In the interest of 9 time I'm going to adopt the well reasoned arguments of counsel 10 for the objectors on the issues of third party releases and 11 valuation and will only supplement where I have something 12 unique to say.

13 On the issue of third party releases, as you know 14 Your Honor, we represent the very parties in this case who are 15 the most injured and those are persons who have suffered losses 16 of limbs, losses of life at the hands of the debtors. And in 17 the context of the proposed plan, the debtors are seeking to 18 exculpate themselves in total from liability for maiming, and 19 killing in some cases, the very wards that they were charged 20 with protecting in the contexts of the operation of the nursing 21 home businesses without any justification -- as counsel pointed 22 out -- without any testimony to support the need for such a 23 classification. We consider this classification to be unfair
24 and we consider the debtors categorization of punitive damage 25 claims to be disparate in impact.

Morrison - Argument

275

1                   In the classification G7 which includes punitive 2 damage claims, the debtor has lumped together, in one fell 3 swoop, all persons having claims that are considered punitive 4 without any differentiation between those that are insured or 5 uninsured or compensable or purely punitive in nature. And 6 debtor's remarks are oh well we tried to work with you, 7 counsel, when you objected to our classification at the 8 disclosure statement. It's not my place to tell the debtor how 9 he can address in a definition the variations in the laws on 10 punitive damages and the insurability of punitive damages both 11 the classification of the damages as being exemplary or 12 compensatory and the insurability of those damages in every 13 state.

14                 Frankly, I don't know, as I stand here today, the 15 vagaries of the various laws on those issues. I know a few. I 16 know as I mentioned in my cross-examination of Mr. Hager, that 17 in the state of Alabama, for example, that a wrongful death
18 claimant is limited solely to punitive damages and those claims 19 are considered compensatory. Likewise in the state of Texas a 20 punitive damage claim is a hybrid of both a penalty and an 21 inconsequential damage component, if you will, and attorneys 22 fees. In other states attorneys fees are awarded as part of 23 the punitive damages as opposed to as a separate claim.

24                 So I don't frankly think that the debtor could come 25 up with a definition that would put, fairly put, the proper

Morrison - Argument

276

1 sets or subsets of punitive damage claimants in one particular 2 class. And, therefore, it is our position that because of the 3 disparate treatment of punitive damage claimants, that in 4 addition to the fact that the subcategorization is unnecessary 5 and an unfair classification in the first place, that there has 6 been no showing by this debtor to justify the disparate 7 treatment of those persons within class 7.

8 On the issue of valuation and without getting into, 9 again, I adopt everything that the objectors have said, but 10 also I think it's interesting to note, Your Honor, the timing 11 of this plan. While it is certainly a laudable goal under 12 other circumstances for a debtor to submit a plan of 13 reorganization early in the reorganization process, I think 14 it's telling that Genesis is rushing to the table with a plan
15 when all of its constituents have taken, you know, companies 16 that have gone in earlier than Genesis and are still in 17 bankruptcy. Vencore went in in September of '99 and they came 18 out in April of 2001. Mariner went in in January of 2000 and 19 they don't have a plan on the table yet.

20 I think it's telling, Your Honor, in the context of 21 bad faith. This plan is being railroaded through by the 22 secured creditors. Why? For the reason that the valuation 23 testimony that you heard today based on 12 month historical 24 figures, which under other circumstances would be perfectly 25 appropriate, was orchestrated with the intent that this Court

1 not consider the drastic change in the long term care market 2 which has occurred in the last two quarters. I think it's also 3 telling that Mr. Hager testified that the APS deal is in the 4 works and I believe his testimony was that there was no letter
5 of intent signed which was contradicted by Mr. Schulte who said 6 that there was, in fact, a letter of intent and that there was 7 no similar letter of intent with Omnicare because they had an 8 exclusive deal.

9 Now, why don't we wait until that deal closes instead 10 of just assuming that it will never close because of all these 11 speculative contingencies with, you know, Omnicare submitting a 12 bid and auction processes and things that are purely 13 speculative in nature. What is the reason that we are rushing 14 here to have this Court approve a plan before we know whether 15 Genesis will be the successful bidder or purchaser of APS and 16 before we have historical data, six months from now, on what 17 the impact of that transaction is on revenues, earnings and 18 EBITDA and the like? And I suggest that the testimony of 19 debtor's witnesses, coupled with their experts, coupled with 20 the timing of this plan, justify this Court rejecting the plan 21 on the basis of bad faith.

22 On the issue of the punitive damage subordination, we 23 raised in our objection that, according to the United States
24 Supreme Court in the recent case of United States v. Noland, 25 that the debtors attempting to categorically subordinate

Morrison - Argument

278

1      punitive damage claims, which violates the mandate of U.S. v.
2      Noland. In response the debtor said oh we didn't really mean 3      equitable -- we didn't mean to subordinate punitive damage 4      claims notwithstanding that we say that in page 21 of our 5      disclosure statement, that was a typo and it doesn't say that 6      in the plan. What it says in the plan is punitive damage
7      claimants will receive nothing. It doesn't say anything about 8      subordination and the debtors are relying on the fact that the 9      plan document controls.

10       Well, it seems awfully convenient that the debtor can 11      ignore its subordination argument once I raised U.S. Noland and 12      simply say that it's a typo and, you know, the ultimate 13      document is the one that controls. In fact, the U.S. v. Noland 14      case is apposite notwithstanding the debtor's attempt to 15      distinguish it in their papers. In that case the Supreme Court 16      considered equitable subordination of a tax penalty. It
17      discussed at length the Fifth Circuit case of In Re Mobil Steel 18      which was highly cited for the issue of equitable subordination 19      and the fact that it's only appropriate in situations where a 20      creditor has engaged in bad conduct, pretty much. There've 21      been a whole plethora of cases that have discussed what the 22      type of conduct which would justify equitable subordination 23      would be and they basically involve fraud, self-dealing on the 24      part of insiders and so forth.

25       In this case, you know, we've kind of flip flopped

Morrison - Argument

279

1 the law. We have people who are innocent incompetents, in most 2 cases, who have themselves sustained personal injuries, and in 3 some cases wrongful death, at the hands of the debtors and yet 4 they are being penalized and punished by being entirely 5 disenfranchised without any showing, without any showing of 6 inequitable conduct or bad conduct or anything else, simply by 7 the debtor suggesting that they had a typo in their disclosure 8 statement and that the United States Supreme Court mandate on 9 this issue is inapposite because it's a tax penalty as opposed 10 to a punitive damage claim.

11 I suggest, Your Honor, that all of the cases cited by 12 debtor to support the subordination or disallowance of punitive 13 damages pre-date the Noland opinion. And since the Noland 14 opinion there have not been any, to my knowledge, cases which 15 distinguish that opinion in the context of bankruptcy punitive 16 damage disallowance or subordination.

17 With regard to the debtors position that this deal 18 cut between senior lenders and the committee, is consensual and 19 it doesn't involve any violation of Bankruptcy Code because 20 it's a side deal among creditors, I would respectfully suggest 21 that the committee, if that's the case, breached its duty to my 22 clients who are constituents of the committee, notwithstanding 23 that the proposed plan considers my claimants, my punitive 24 damage claimants, to be some sort of disenfranchised group.
25 Unless and until there's a confirmation of that plan, my

Morrison - Argument

280

1 clients are unsecured creditors and the committee has an 2 obligation to act on behalf of all unsecured creditors not just 3 the ones that sit on the committee. And, in that context, I 4 think that the committee has breached its obligation to 5 punitive damage claimants by completely sacrificing them to the 6 lambs and suggesting that they be disenfranchised so that the 7 remaining body of unsecured creditors could receive an enhanced 8 distribution under the plan.

9 On the issue -- again, counsel mentioned this so I'll 10 only mention it very briefly, Your Honor. The testimony is 11 that the debtor doesn't believe that there are any punitive 12 damage cases. In fact, Mr. Hager said in his tenure with the 13 company, which is over a decade, he's never seen one. If 14 that's the case, coupled with the disclosure statement 15 references on page 21 of debtor's counsel that notwithstanding 16 that several proofs of claim have been filed concerning 17 personal injury or wrongful death claims that include punitive 18 damages, that the Genesis debtors do not believe that there 19 will be any allowed claims in this class. So this is much ado 20 about nothing, Your Honor. We think there's no justification 21 for the subordination disallowance, whatever they want to call 22 it, and that coupled with the fact that we think that this 23 company has been undervalued, that the debtors have not met 24 their burden, even under the preponderance standard of showing 25 that there is insufficient equity to distribute to the

1 unsecured creditors, and for that reason we think that the plan
2 should be rejected.

3 THE COURT: Thank you.

4 MR. HUDGENS: Your Honor, David Hudgens. I think one 5 advantage of coming late to the game is I'll necessarily be 6 short. I think the debtor in this case has failed to meet the 7 statutory requirements for confirmation of this plan. In order
8 for you to confirm this plan, there has to be a liquidation
9 analysis because the Code requires you to consider other things
10 in relationship to the liquidation analysis. The only thing 11 the debtor did was put on a witness who purported to give a 12 liquidation analysis that considered one manner of selling the 13 business in a consolidated fashion as far as all the different 14 legal entities that existed, although he segregated those sales 15 into kind of lines of business.

16 Well there hasn't been a consolidation of all those 17 individual legal entities in this case. We have no idea what a 18 liquidation analysis would show if you took the legal entities 19 that exist now and considered liquidation of all those separate 20 entities and saw what the results were.

21 In addition, that expert testified that he never even 22 looked at appraised values of the company's property in 23 considering that liquidation analysis. He doesn't know the 24 only piece of property that there was a value given for was the 25 corporate offices and it was valued at between 25 and 50

Hudgens - Argument

282

1 percent of cost, but there was no testimony about why it was 2 valued at between 25 and 50 percent of cost. There could be 3 extremely unusual circumstances where corporate offices could 4 lose that much value, but common sense tells you they probably 5 didn't. So the only time they used value for a piece of 6 property, they used, what from all appearances is, an extremely 7 unrealistic value without ever looking to see if there was an 8 appraisal of the property.

9 Now, he gives the excuse that well they're dated, the 10 appraisals are dated. But when I asked him about it, he never 11 looked to see when they were done. He didn't know. He'd never 12 considered that. Now I submit that one of the reasons that 13 that analysis was never done is because there's this senior 14 lender out there that's got a security interest in a whole 15 bunch of stuff and that senior lender or the secured lenders in 16 most bankruptcies would be looking at that. But in this case 17 they don't have any incentive to. Why? Because they're 18 getting essentially all the stock of the corporation any way.
19 They're going to get what they want without ever having to go 20 through the analysis that the Code requires. I believe the 21 debtor has just failed to meet the statutory requirements of 22 setting forth to liquidate a realistic liquidation analysis for 23 these debtors.

24 The next place I think there are problems is the 25 disclosure statement and I realize there's been a hearing in

Hudgens - Argument

1 which the disclosure statement was approved, but that 2 disclosure statement is the basis for people deciding how to 3 vote on this plan. We get in here a month after the disclosure 4 statement is sent out -- roughly a month after the disclosure 5 statement is sent out -- and every expert testified that the 6 company was worth roughly 250 million dollars more than that 7 disclosure statement said the company was worth. That's 8 roughly 15 to 20 percent increase in value of the company over 9 the values given in the disclosure statement.

10 Now, I believe that the values given in the 11 disclosure statement weren't even accurate when the disclosure 12 statement was sent out because I believe most of the runup in 13 the stock occurred before the disclosure statement was sent 14 out. But even if the disclosure statements were accurate when 15 they were sent out, this Court should consider that by the date 16 of the confirmation hearing the value of the entity was 15 to 17 20 percent more than the disclosure statement showed. I don't 18 see how this Court can approve a plan where votes were 19 solicited on disclosure statements where there's such a 20 disparity in value.

21 And my final point is that a plan has to be fair and 22 equitable. And I think in considering that requirement, the 23 Court has to take into consideration that the officers and 24 directors of a corporation have a fiduciary duty to the 25 shareholders. In addition, once the corporation is insolvent,
